

Falling...in Love with San Miguel

Jazzpañol Concert at El Viejo topo, September 1st, 2007

Ruth Lara Vichules. A multicultural experience revealed through good jazz.

*From Don Miguel's Epicurean corner
September 16th, 2007*

She plays the guitar, the saxophone and the violin, among other musical instruments. She sings beautifully. She is also an educator, multifaceted entertainer, storyteller, self-educated in the Spanish language and an in-depth researcher of the Latino musical roots through her countless visits to Mexico from her native Phoenix, AZ.

All the above extraordinary experiences gradually molded her music through time and decisively contributed to create: Jazzpanol., a "melange" of classic jazz and latin genders which - although others musicians have already experimented - reaches special tints in the educated voice of Ruth Vichules, as she is also well known.

After her glamorous presentation at El Viejo Topo early this month, now DVINO, the cozy wine bar at La Aurora, brings her back to San Miguel de Allende for only two exclusive presentations.

In this opportunity, Vichules will delight an always avid local audience for good music with songs of her most recent album - JAZZPANOL - a summary of traditional jazz and immortal well known latin songs. "Easy living", "Sabor a mi", "Eclipse", "Obsesion" and the always difficult to execute, "All of me", will all be part of her repertoire. It's a show that in my opinion should not be missed.
